One hot summer day, Geronimo gets a craving for an ice cream and ends up at a carnival. What he doesn't know is that hidden somewhere there is the secret headquarters of the Mystery Hunters, a network of rodents with a passion for solving unsolvable mysteries! This marks the beginning of a series of fabulous new adventures for Geronimo, all set in the outer limits of reality.

After being made an unlikely "probationary secret agent," he embarks on a series of adventures, all of them full of plot twists and laughs, that lead him to making some sensational discoveries.

His first mission leads him to find the three Spheres of Time, all of them hidden in places shrouded in mystery: the Bermuda triangle, Machu Picchu, and Easter Island. On their second mission, Geronimo and the Mystery Hunters investigate some baffling sightings of various legendary creatures. And so begins a fur-raising adventure that sees them in hot pursuit of the Loch Ness monster, meeting a Yeti in the Himalayas, and, finally, coming face to face with a Kraken!

They then land on Pansaurus, a mysterious planet inhabited by dinosaurs, where a sneaky rodent is plotting behind the scenes for her own sinister purposes.

PEACE IS...

What's the best way to help Benjamin, Trappy, and their classmates with their fear over the outbreak of war?

Geronimo has an idea: he dedicates a special edition of the Rodent's Gazette to peace to spread awareness, commitment, hope, and harmony.

The mouselings become special reporters and track down news stories that can help explain what peace is: a basketball game turns out to be a chance to talk about respect, a snack focuses attention on solidarity and collaboration, while having to look after a puppy becomes an example of commitment and caring for others.

In the end, the mouseling reporters work out that everyone can do a lot to make the world a better place. Because we are peace!

HOW TO BE A MOUSETASTIC WRITER

Benjamin and Trappy's class has won a mouserific prize: a workshop where they'll learn all the tricks of the writing trade! And their teacher will be none other than Geronimo Stilton in fur and whiskers! But all kinds of mysterious events happen during the lessons. It almost seems like sabotage! But Geronimo ends up not only solving the mystery, but also publishing a book of the stories written by his mouseling students!

The appendix includes a manual of creative writing, with simple explanations of literary genres and the writing process, and a "creativity playground" for having fun with words, characters, stories, and their endings.

His friends, though, turn out to be less than cooperative. Geronimo does his best to motivate them but, after a long, tiring day, he falls asleep on the stage. The moment he closes his eyes, a young mouse with blond hair and big blue eyes appears before him. It's the Little Prince himself with his friend the fox. The fox is holding the prince's rose between his paws, but it's withered. He asks Geronimo to help restore its strength and color. So begins a fantastic journey in which Geronimo introduces the Little Prince to his friends, each of whom has just the right words to heal the withered rose. And, when he wakes up, Geronimo is in for a wonderful surprise!
